BRAND OVERVIEW

INTRODUCTION

Over the past ten years, Tate's profile has grown and our identity is increasingly recognised in the UK and across the world. It is one of our strengths, helping us to attract and engage visitors, collaborate with partners and strengthen our network of supporters.

Some might associate a brand exclusively with a logo. It is actually much more than that. Our brand is our identity: it represents what we believe in and what makes us distinctive and different. This should be embodied in everything we do – from how we greet visitors and the welcome we provide in our shops and cafés, to the way we communicate with our colleagues and supporters.

Everyone at Tate has a role to play in upholding the values of the Tate brand. We are all responsible for ensuring that what we do, say, write and create is consistent with our identity, and is easily understood by all.

This document provides guidelines on how to use elements that help define our identity: our logo, our typeface and our written style. Following these guidelines will help us work more collaboratively and consistently to make sure our visual and written communications are clear and in line with our brand identity, so we can achieve the greatest impact with our audiences.

By understanding and following these guidelines, we can further strengthen the clarity of our message and our identity and continue to be as successful in future decades as we have been in previous years.

TATE BRAND IDEA

Tate's mission is to promote public understanding and enjoyment of British, modern and contemporary art – in a phrase, to democratise access to art.

Provoking dialogue between artists, audiences and institutions, through art, is central to helping us achieve our mission of democratising access to art.

We want to encourage multiple voices and multiple conversations; to be open and porous; and to provoke a global dialogue involving millions of people, through art.

Tate provokes dialogue across five platforms...

TATE PLATFORMS

Tate's five platforms for dialogue are

TATE BRITAIN

provokes dialogue by finding continuities and change across 500 years of British art

TATE LIVERPOOL

provokes dialogue through a distinctive attitude to art that's pioneering, international and attuned to contemporary culture

TATE MODERN

provokes dialogue through modern and contemporary art from cultures across the world

TATE ST IVES

provokes dialogue between art, artists and audiences in the unique context of Cornwall

PLUS TATE

provokes dialogue by working with other organisations in Britain and worldwide

Across all five platforms, Tate has distinctive brand values...

TATE BRAND VALUES

Everything Tate does expresses our brand values

OPEN

Open to new ideas, welcoming, inviting and collaborative

DIVERSE

Contemporary viewpoints, reflective of the diversity of the UK and the world

INTERNATIONAL

With art and attitudes beyond the west

ENTREPRENEURIAL

Ambitious and innovative, inspired

SUSTAINABLE

Enduring, rigorous and trustworthy

In every experience Tate creates, there is a clear invitation...

TATE INVITATION

Across all our activity, Tate's invitation to everyone is look again, think again, join in

In expanding access to art, we offer both an invitation and a challenge: not just to look and think, but also to join in - to respond, debate and participate.

BRAND ELEMENTS

TATE LOGOS

There are a number of variations of the Tate logo, reflecting the dynamic nature of our approach to engaging with our audiences. The variations allow for the greatest flexibility of use depending on the situation in which the logo is being used. This section explains about the Tate logo and its variations, and the ways they can be used.

It is important to choose the correct logo to suit the size and medium for your purpose. Each variation is clearly named to help ensure you are using the correct one for your needs. If you would like help in determining the right logo to use, please contact Tate Design Studio (contact details in Section 3).

Tate logos may be reproduced in any colour from the Tate colour palette on corporate materials (such as business cards, stationery, forms and reports). The Tate logo may be reproduced in other colours on some creative materials, such as marketing campaign collateral, but please do check with Tate Design Studio first.

TATE LOGOS

CORE AND PLATFORM LOGOS

Tate's brand structure aims to highlight Tate's five platforms for dialogue with and among our audiences. For that reason, these are the only parts of Tate that have their own logo.
The core Tate logo should be used by all other parts of Tate.

TATE CORE LOGO

Tate's personality is always changing, always Tate. Tate embraces many voices, takes many forms and continues to evolve – but is always recognisable. For that reason, there are five different variations of the core Tate logo. This logo should be used for all aspects of Tate that are not platform specific, for example: Tate Collection, Tate Catering, Tate Members, Tate Library and Archive, Tate Learning etc.

TATE PLATFORM LOGOS

If you are one of the five platforms: Tate Britain, Tate Liverpool, Tate Modern, Tate St Ives, Plus Tate: Use your own platform logo. As with the core logo, there are different variations of the five platform logos.

CORE LOGO VARIATIONS

To communicate a brand which is constantly changing, there are five different variations of the core Tate logo. These variations should all be used at different times and in different contexts so that the full variety of logos is used, reinforcing the dynamic nature of our approach.

LOGO SIZES

Each logo family is available in three sizes (small, standard and large).

It is important to use the correct size logo to ensure that the logo will be clear and legible when it is reproduced. For example, a small press advert should always use the small-use logos and a large wall vinyl should always use the large-use logos.

Please contact Tate Design Studio for advice on which logo to use for more unusual reproductions of the Tate logo, for example silk screening on fabric.

SMALL-USE LOGOS

from 20mm wide (minimum size)
up to 35mm wide (maximum size)

STANDARD-USE LOGOS

EXCLUSION ZONES

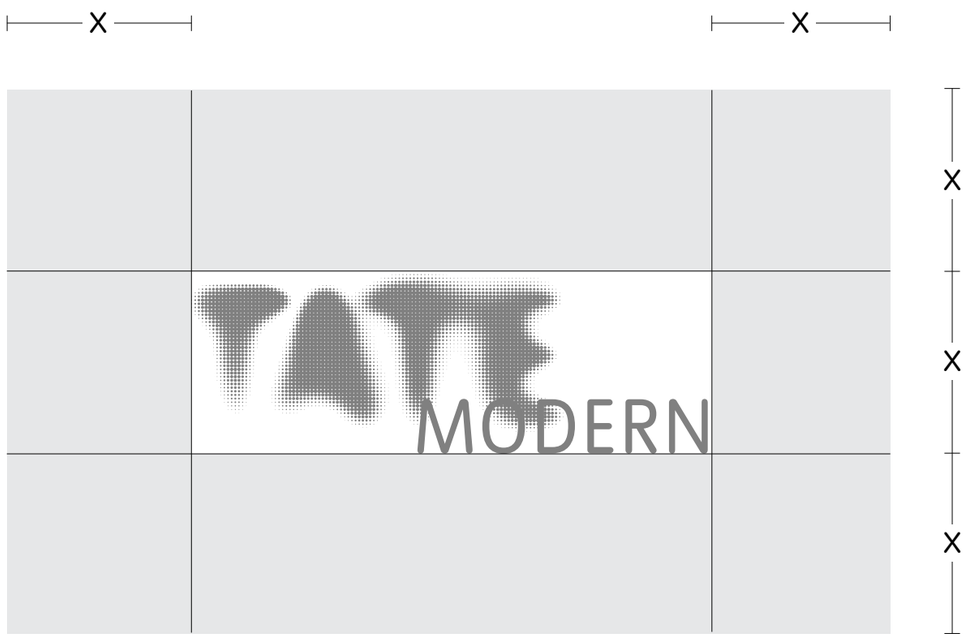

Please do not overcrowd the Tate logo when placing it next to other logos or graphics.
Leave a minimum clear area around the mark equal to the height of the word ‘Tate’ to prevent any secondary material inhibiting legibility.

If the logo is placed on top of an image it should always be placed so that it is clearly visible and should not be placed on busy backgrounds where the background may reduce legiblity of the logo.

PLEASE NOTE

All details shown in grey are guides only and should not be printed.

USING TATE LOGOS

TATE DEPARTMENTS / TATE COMPANIES

For work that is not specific to one of the platforms (Tate Britain, Tate Liverpool, Tate Modern, Tate St Ives, Plus Tate) for example Tate Collection, Tate Research, Tate Learning, Tate Members, Tate Catering, Tate Library and Archive, Tate Enterprises

So that you get the most from being a core part of Tate, use the core Tate logo.
No new logos should be created, as this dilutes the strength of the Tate brand.
If you wish to write your department or company name, please write it in Tate typeface in bold sentence case, well away from the logo.

To reinforce a strong Tate identity, you won't need to write out your department or company name on most material, as your department or company is a part of Tate. The use of the core Tate logo is sufficient. You may wish to write out your department name on material for other businesses and commercial companies (for example Tate suppliers). However, before writing your department name on any material designed for our audiences, please check with Tate Design Studio it is appropriate to do so, as in most cases this will not be necessary.

The same rules apply to online use, but please also check current Online Visual Style Guides (available from Tate Design Studio).

TATE PROGRAMMES

If you run one of Tate's cross-platform programmes for example Tate Shots, Tate Families, Tate Kids, Tate Film, Young Tate

So that you get the most from being a core part of Tate, use the core Tate logo.
No new logos should be created, as this dilutes the strength of the Tate brand.
If you wish to write your programme name, please write it in Tate typeface (using any of the four weights), well away from the Tate logo.

Please be as creative as you wish to be illustrating the content of your programme, however please keep your programme name in Tate typeface, and do not create a distinctive way of writing your name.

The same rules apply to online use, but please also check current Online Visual Style Guides (available from Tate Design Studio).

TATE TYPEFACE

Tate is a modern, clear and distinctive typeface, designed for use in most applications.
It should be used for all Tate internal signage and for all Tate communications.

There are four weights of the Tate typeface, also available in italics. There are no rules about which weight to use – choose the one which best fits your message.

TATE WRITTEN STYLE

Tate has full Written Style Guides. These are the most common guides:

1. Tate is simply known as Tate. Please don't say 'the Tate' or 'Tate Gallery', just 'Tate'
2. Dates: Please format dates as follows:
   Monday 23 September 2010
3. Numbers: In general, write out numbers up to one hundred eg nine, sixty-four. If space is limited, for example pieces of short copy for marketing or online use, you can write out 'one' to 'twenty' then use numerals for 21 and over. Write out percentages, for example, ten percent.
4. Time: use the 24 hour clock and full stops (not colons) eg 19.00, 21.45
5. Telephone numbers: correct formats are 020 7887 8888 (not 0207 887 8888), or +44 (0)20 7887 8888 (there is a space after the '44' and after the '20')
6. Use the following format for captions for artworks:
   John Constable The Hay Wain 1820
   Please do not put the year in brackets or put a comma preceding the year
7. Exhibition titles and artwork titles: italicise exhibition titles when referring to them in text; also italicise artwork titles when referring to artworks in text
8. Punctuation: Open punctuation is used in all Tate correspondence, documents etc. By this we mean no commas or 'st, th, rd' etc in dates, addresses or after the salutation or close in a letter and no full stops after abbreviations or headings. Nouns, titles, dates, times, telephone numbers and figures should also not be hyphenated at the end of a line, but kept together on the same line.

For further guidance about how to write in Tate style, please refer to Tate Written Style Guides, available from Tate Design Studio or on the Intranet.
